PUBLIC WORK'S DEMONSTRATION GARDEN

As we face a devastating three-year drought and environmental court rulings impacting local water supply, the City's Public Work's Department is responding by creating a demonstration garden, located at the Municipal Service Center, to promote southwestern natives and California friendly plants. This garden is a unique educational resource that features an array of native, drought tolerant plants and plant information.

There is a large water savings potential in landscaping, with more than half of residential water usage applied to outdoor landscape. By planting native and California friendly plants, you can save lots of water and maintain a beautiful, colorful garden! An additional benefit of having a California friendly garden includes the attraction of essential wildlife, such as beneficial insects, pollinators and native birds.

The City was awarded partial funding to complete the demonstration garden from the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California through its Community Partnering Program.
